
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEAmanda Wyrick becomes registered architect in North Carolina and named project architect

Greensboro, NC (June 12, 2024) – Lindsey Architecture is pleased to announce that Amanda Wyrick, AIA, NCARB, recently passed her architectural exams and has become a licensed, registered architect in the State of North Carolina. As a result of her professional registration and talent, she has also been promoted to project architect.

Amanda has spent her entire professional career with Lindsey Architecture. Most recently, she served as architectural designer, which is a role she held since June 2018. Previously, she served as architectural intern through 2017.

She holds a Bachelor of Environmental Design in Architecture and a Bachelor of Architecture with a minor in Business Administration from NC State University. Recent projects she has contributed to and/or managed include: the Statesville Regional Airport Terminal (currently in construction), Greensboro Science Center's Expedition Rainforest (currently in design), Greensboro Science Center's Revolution Ridge Zoo Expansion; and the Greensboro Rotary Carousel, and many others.

"We are excited for Amanda – in terms of her professional achievement and on becoming the newest architect on our team," stated Rod Lindsey, AIA, LEED AP, NCARB, president and founder of Lindsey Architecture. "Her commitment to the industry, her craft, our clients, and the firm is to be commended. We are proud of how far she has advanced in her career in such a short period of time. We look forward to the positive impact she will continue to have on our clients and projects, as well as within our community and our firm."

With Amanda's registration, Lindsey Architecture's registered architects make up 40 percent of the firm's staff, unofficially ranking the firm in the top six firms in the Piedmont Triad region in terms of the total number of registered architects. Previously, the firm was ranked at #10 on the Largest Architectural Firms in the Triad list by the Triad Business Journal in May 2024.
