
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEEmily Hinton, AIA, DBIA, NCARB, named president of CPN North Carolina

Greensboro, NC (May 6, 2024) – Lindsey Architecture partner and architect, Emily Hinton, was installed as CPN North Carolina's (CPN NC) president last week during the organization's annual conference in Virginia Beach, Virginia. Emily has served on the CPN NC Board of Directors for several years. Most recently, she served as president-elect. Previously, she held various roles including Board secretary and conference planning committee chair.

Emily has served as partner of Lindsey Architecture since 2018 and has been with the firm since 2015. As principal-in-charge of the Higher Education, Civic/Community, and Government markets, she strategically transforms her clients' visions into new (or renewed) spaces, which serve as inspirational and practical physical assets for their organization, clients, employees, and occupants. Her notable projects include the award-winning Greensboro Science Center Zoo Expansion, the Greensboro Science Center Aquarium, and the Greensboro Science Center Expedition Rainforest, which is currently in design. Other projects include the Guilford Metro 911 Renovation, Greensboro Battleground Parks District Phase I, Greensboro Rotary Carousel, UNCG Plant and Pollinator Center, among dozens of others.

Emily has a Bachelor of Architecture with a minor in Urban studies from the UNC Charlotte School of Architecture. She is a member of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) and served for several years as an executive board member and past-president of AIA's Piedmont Chapter. She served on the Board of Directors for Greensboro Downtown Parks, Inc., and is a member of Design Build Institute of America and SynerG Young Professionals.

"We are excited to support Emily and her passion for serving as a leader, mentor, and volunteer in the industry and the community," stated Rod Lindsey, AIA, LEED AP, NCARB, president and founder of Lindsey Architecture. "Her commitment to CPN of North Carolina and engagement with the membership is something to be celebrated, and we look forward to doing so with her this year as she serves as the organization's president. We couldn't be more proud."

Emily's role as president will continue until the organization's next annual conference at the end of April 2025, at which time she will move into the past-president role.
