Lindsey Architecture hires two summer interns

Greensboro, NC (June 14, 2022) – Lindsey Architecture is excited to announce two new interns have joined the team in the Greensboro headquarters location, including an interior architecture student from UNC Greensboro (UNCG) and an architectural design student from James Madison University (JMU).

Hadley C. Cowan is a rising senior at JMU, earning a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Architectural Design. Hadley is a member of the JMU Chapter of the American Institute of Architecture, Kappa Pi | SCAD Fraternity, The National Society of Leadership and Success, and she volunteers with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. She will graduate in May 2023 when she aspired to work with a firm that focuses on interior design and architecture.

Kayla Langley is a rising senior at UNC Greensboro, earning a Bachelor's in Interior Architecture. She previously held internships with Morgan-Langley Interior Design, Vanguard Furniture Showroom, and Blueprint Investment Partners. She will graduate in May 2023 when she plans to either focus on residential interior design or commercial design.

"We are excited to have Hadley and Kayla join our team for the summer," stated Rod Lindsey, AIA, NCARB, president of Lindsey Architecture. "Their experience and special interests will complement our team nicely, and we look forward to their contributions on our current projects under the mentorship of our senior design talent."
